

Part 1:

Read Chapter 1 of Sue's seminal text on microaggressions. You can access this electronically through the library:

<http://libcat.tcnj.edu:7009/vwebv/holdingsInfo?bibId=835609>

Part 2:

Participate in the "Killing me softly" microaggression simulator:

<http://fobettarh.github.io/Killing-Me-Softly/>

Part 3:

Write a brief (1 page, size 12 font, double spaced) reaction that (a) explains what microaggressions are, (b) describes the microaggression that most stood out in the simulation, and (c) identifies a point in the student's own life when you may have committed a microaggression without realizing it.

You have several options for turning this in:

1. Submit this reflection in Canvas along with your workshop attendance sheet at the end of the semester.
2. Submit this reflection early to Canvas in the same assignment as your workshop attendance sheet. If you do this and want to upload your workshop sheet to Canvas later, click "re-submit assignment" to upload your workshop sheet. We will be able to see both submissions.
3. You can turn in your hard copy of this reflection to the office at any time; it can be attached to your workshop sheet or submitted early.